The Jockey Club Cadenza Project

is organizing a public education fair in conjunction with the presentation of awards for the competition entitled "CADENZA: Reflections on the Beauty of Ageing – Images & Words" – a public education event designed to promote the positive face of ageing, to celebrate the Senior Citizen's Day, on 18 November.

The venue will be the Jockey Club School of Public Health Building at the Prince of Wales Hospital. (pls see attached map, transport details at the end of the pamphlet)

The programme will start with a prize presentation ceremony by a panel of experts honouring the winners of a number of selected photographs and accompanying captions. Through this event, it is hoped that inspiring images and words on different perspectives of positive ageing will be captured and communicated to the public and thereby contribute to changing society's view of old age. More details of the competition can be found on CADENZA's website: <http://www.cadenza.org.hk>

After the ceremony, two overseas experts (Prof. John Morley from the University of St. Louis, Missouri, U.S.A., and Prof. Kay-Tee Khaw from the University of Cambridge, U.K.) will enlighten us on the secrets of longevity: role of hormones or lifestyle, followed by some data on vascular health and lifestyle for the Hong Kong elderly population, presented by Prof. Jean Woo, Project Director of Cadenza Project.

There will be interactive exhibitions relating to the six themes: positive ageing – health promotion and maintenance; ageism; availability of health and social services in Hong Kong; the living environment; quality of life and quality of dying; and legal and financial issues.
